WHY THIS PROGRAMME?

It is observed changes are inevitable and not always controllable. What can be controlled is how one manages, reacts to and works through the change process. Individual change management requires understanding how people experience change and what they need to change successfully. It also requires knowing what will help people make a successful transition: what messages do people need to hear when and from whom, when the optimal time to teach someone a new skill is, how to coach people to demonstrate new behaviours, and what makes changes “stick” in someone’s work. Not only does it help the individual but also the organisation needs to give a reactive or a proactive response to the changes that happen internally or externally. It helps to promote a deeper level of understanding, as employees are required to accept change which is the only constant in their lives.
